ALICE WALKER

Salt Lake Community College is Utah's largest two-year college.

For more than 75 years, SLCC has made major contributions to Utah's economy by providing education and training that leads to vibrant careers and a high quality of life.

SLCC serves about

52,000

students per year.

More than 39,000 enroll to earn credit hours while over 13,000 turn to the College annually to pursue not-for-credit education and training.[1]

In addition to offering associate degrees, SLCC is the leading provider of applied technology courses and workforce programs in the Salt Lake Valley.

In fact, our career and technical education graduates are highly sought after by employers and typically earn starting wages above $50,000.[2]
